

ACA QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE 2025 SEMINAR IN THE HAGUE ON CONTRIBUTING TO THE QUALITY OF LEGISLATION

Looking into the role of advisory bodies, like Councils of State ex ante, but also the role of Supreme Administrative Courts ex ante or ex post (giving feedback to the legislature) aimed to improve practical effectiveness, proportionality and fairness of legislation

INTRODUCTION

The role of state powers in the legislative process

Laws order society, protect and give direction. Laws regulate the behaviour of citizens and government and are an important pillar to give citizens legal certainty. Legislation must therefore offer clarity but also flexibility in a changing society. Developments in society require choices that sometimes, but not always, also lead to legislation. Given this, the deployment and use of legislation must be handled with care because the expectations it raises must be fulfilled and the law must retain its validity in the long term.

Legislation ideally comes about in a continuous and constructive dialogue between the state powers. The executive and the judiciary branch depend on good legislation. Legislation that is carefully drafted, with sufficient attention to all relevant interests and values, including enforceability, will in practice lead to fewer problems and thus fewer lawsuits. And legislators can improve the quality of legislation by drawing in part on the previous practical experiences of executive agencies and (administrative) judges in implementing and enforcing the law and any shortcomings they have found.

There are various (formal, regulated but also informal) instruments or mechanisms through which (solicited or unsolicited) input from executive agencies and the judicial branch, as well as from independent general advisory bodies regarding future and existing legislation is or can be provided. For example, instruments that are used prior to the creation of legislation (simply referred to as 'consultation' or ex ante) and instruments that are used in response to existing legislation (simply referred to as 'feedback' or ex post).

On May 15, 2017, an ACA seminar in The Hague discussed the tools and mechanisms existing in different countries that can contribute to good legislative quality. Almost all ACA members who responded (28 in total) reported having some experience in providing feedback, whether on a regular basis or not, to legislators on trends and other developments they have observed. This input is provided in various ways; not only through independent opinions and (administrative) court rulings, but also through various formal and informal mechanisms used by consultants, executive agencies, regulators, and judges.

Now several years later, there is again a need to organize a new seminar on the contribution to legislative quality to further explore this topic among members of the

Co-funded by
the European Union

ACA-EUROPE and beyond, with a particular focus on legislative advice and judicial feedback to the legislator. To that end, this questionnaire is drafted.

Legislative advice

Legislative advice can contribute to the quality of legislation. In that case- in short- it is tested whether a legislative proposal fits within existing laws and the legal system as a whole, is implementable and enforceable. In doing so, numerous aspects of legislative quality can be examined, both legal and policy aspects. And to that extent, legislative advice can respond to and make use of the interaction between the state powers. After all, the state powers each have an interest and a role to play in the legislative process based on their responsibility at any given moment. Policy, legislation and implementation can work closely together in the cyclical legislative process in order to provide solicited or unsolicited feedback on the quality of the proposed law.

Against this background, the Advisory Division of the Dutch Council of State conducts as part of its regular advisory task an analysis that examines whether, among other things, the experiences and views of executive agencies (including local and regional authorities) and the judicial branch have been adequately taken into account in the drafting of the bill. To this end, in addition to a constitutional and legal analysis, the Advisory Division also conducts a policy and implementation analysis and, where appropriate, also analyses the consequences for legal practice. No ranking or order exists between these parts of the assessment. The policy and implementation analysis may in themselves give rise to comments but also provide important input to the legal and constitutional analysis, for example with respect to the proportionality of the bill.

The Belgian Council of State, on the other hand, only carries out a legal examination, which in any case concerns the competence of the legislator, the existence of a sufficient legal basis for regulatory acts and compliance with higher legal standards, as well as compliance with the mandatory formal requirements for the creation of the new law. If it follows from the applicable higher legal standards or principles, a proportionality test, a test of substantive motives or an effectiveness test shall also be carried out where appropriate. In no case, however, does the opinion concern the mere policy expediency of a new legal norm.

Communication between state powers

In order to function well the legislative, executive and judicial state powers are separated but also mutually dependent. There might be tension between the state powers sometimes, for example as a result of legislation which does not take certain interests or general principles of law into account. For a dynamic and healthy balance between the state powers judicial (constitutional) review ex ante and ex post are very relevant.

Depending on the design of an ex post constitutional review, this raises the question of what this means for the ex-ante constitutional review conducted within that framework. Of course, as legislative institutions, government and parliament are primarily responsible for the quality of legislation and ideally already conduct a thorough review of the constitution, higher law and fundamental legal principles during the creation of legislation. What impact does the possibility of ex post judicial constitutional review have on an ex ante constitutional review by an independent general advisory body, such as an Advisory Division of a Council of State? And in how far do administrative courts provide feedback to the legislator in case they encounter more or less technical problems in legislation? But also vice versa, which influence does constitutional review ex ante have on judgements by (administrative) courts?

ACA questionnaire

In light of these themes and developments and in the interest of the quality of legislation, a further survey of the instruments of feedback is desirable and also of great interest in the ACA context. For this reason, the Dutch and Belgium Council of State organise an ACA seminar in The Hague on March 17-18, 2025 on the topic of legislative advice and feedback. In preparation for that seminar, we are pleased to submit to you the questionnaire below, which aims to map the design of legislative advice and interaction with the (administrative) courts against the background of developments in the relationship between state powers in general and constitutional review in particular.

The purpose of this questionnaire (chapters 1-3) is to obtain an inventory of the existence, design and working method of independent general advisory bodies.<sup>1</sup> What is that working method and what are the points of interest in the legal, constitutional ex ante review? What influence and significance does an opinion have in the legislative process?

In addition, the questionnaire (chapter 4) makes an inventory of the modes of influence of case law on legislation and the design of ex post judicial constitutional review in different countries. This may offer more insight into the interaction between legislative advice and the judiciary. What trends are visible and how can the ex-ante and ex post constitutional test reinforce each other?

In the case you as ACA-member and Supreme Administrative Court do not yourself have an advisory function ex ante please feel free to consult the institution in your country that has such a function.

<sup>1</sup> Not being specialized advisory bodies that focus on certain sub-interests or sectors or that perform a more technical review, for example, focused on the regulatory burden.

CHAPTER 4 JUDICIAL FEEDBACK TO THE LEGISLATOR

Dealing with cases, the judiciary can be confronted with more or less systemic problems in the interpretation and application of legislation. The following questions are based on the distinction between two kinds of these problems. Firstly, there may arise more or less technical legal issues such as inconsistencies in legislation, a missing legal base or an incompatibility with higher law. Secondly, the administrative courts may come across more structural problems that are not strictly technical in nature and may be more sensitive and complex. Think, for instance, of difficulties for the administration in implementing a certain statute or the exceptionally harsh consequences that legislation might have in certain types of individual cases.

In short, legal or practical reality may differ from what the legislator had in mind. Problems like these cannot always be remedied in the judicial decision. It is then conceivable that the administrative courts decide to signal these points of attention to the legislator in their decisions or by other means, in order to help improving the quality of legislation and the effectiveness of the implementation of law in practice. That kind of judicial feedback to the legislator is the subject of the following questions.

38) Does the highest administrative court provide the legislator with feedback on technical legal issues that arise from legislation?

- Yes
 No

Explanation if desired:

For example, if there is a lack in a legal basis or competence in the law. This feedback is at times provided in normative cases because the Supreme Administrative Court of Lithuania has the authority to rule on the legality of regulatory acts.

39) If yes, where does it provide this feedback on technical legal issues (more options are possible)?

- Judgments
 Indirectly by signalling structural problems to the advisory body
 Annual review
 Journal articles
 Conferences/meetings
 Formal or informal contacts with representatives of the legislator/civil servants
 All of the above
 Other, namely:

.....

40) If the highest administrative court provides feedback in its judgments, how does it do this (more options are possible)?

- X Implicitly in the reasoning of the judgments
- 0 Explicitly in a paragraph that directs itself to the legislator
- X By way of a legal decision on the applicability or bindingness of legislation
- 0 All of the above

Explanation if desired:

41) Could you give an example of this kind of feedback in the highest administrative court's judgments?

Decision of the Supreme Administrative Court of Lithuania of March 23, 2023, in Administrative Case No. R-27-463/2023. Administrative Jurisprudence. 2023, 45 (in translation):

The reinstatement of the candidate for repeated voting when the candidate who received the majority of votes during the first round of voting contests their removal from the elections in court

“Considering the circumstances of the case in question, it is first noted that the situation in dispute is characterized by an unusual factual and legal context for smooth elections. The opportunity for a person to run for election as a candidate for members of the respective elected public authority, as established by the Constitution and the Election Code, and thus to seek election, is an important constitutional right (Constitutional Court decision of May 11, 2011). It is evident that the prohibition on exercising passive electoral rights, applied without a legal basis to the candidate who won the first round of elections, would mean the denial of the right guaranteed by Article 34(2) of the Constitution. <...> In this context, it was emphasized that the Central Electoral Commission, while organizing elections, must apply the law to ensure, inter alia, the proper implementation of electoral principles. Therefore, the efforts to eliminate violations of passive electoral rights, even though there are no established legal norms in the Election Code regulating this extraordinary situation, represent the expression of the constitutional powers granted to the Central Electoral Commission in organizing elections. These efforts were undertaken to restore legality concerning the protection of the rights of the candidate exercising passive electoral rights and the voters who voted for him (paragraph 40). <...> The decision to reinstate the candidate <...> should be viewed as a justified, albeit not ideal, attempt to correct the shortcomings in election organization and thus protect the rights of individuals exercising active electoral rights. It is undeniable that a clear and stable voting procedure and rules are values that foster trust in free and fair elections. Nevertheless, in cases related to shortcomings in election organization, it is equally important to assess whether state institutions took reasonable actions to correct the mistakes made in the electoral process (paragraph 41).”

42) Does the highest administrative court gather information about structural problems that might arise from legislation, such as its unforeseen or exceptionally harsh consequences?

- X Yes

Co-funded by
the European Union

0 No

43) If yes, from what sources does it gather information about these structural problems (more options are possible)?

- Arguments raised by parties
- Case law
- Advisory opinions on draft legislation
- Journal articles
- Conferences/meetings
- All of the above
- Other, namely:

The Supreme Administrative Court of Lithuania may gather information about structural problems arising from legislation by interpreting legislative history and other preparatory documents, known as travaux préparatoires. In addition to this, working groups tasked with drafting legislation materials may also be consulted.

44) Does the highest administrative court provide the legislator with feedback about these structural problems?

- Yes
- No

Explanation if desired:

45) If yes, where does it provide this kind of feedback (more options are possible)?

- Judgments
- Indirectly by signalling structural problems to the advisory body
- Annual review
- Journal articles
- Conferences/meetings
- Formal or informal contacts with representatives of the legislator/civil servants
- All of the above
- Other, namely:

The Court indirectly addresses certain issues through non-formal comments published in its Case-law Reports and Annual reviews. These reports serve as platforms for the court to highlight recurring legal concerns, trends, and systemic problems, such as incompatibility with EU law or the case-law of the European Court of Human Rights, without formally proposing legislative changes. By providing insights and observations in these publications, the Court fosters awareness among lawmakers and the legal community regarding areas that may require attention or reform. This approach allows the Court to fulfill its role in the broader legal dialogue while respecting the separation of powers, ensuring that it does not overstep its mandate of interpreting and applying the law.

46) Could you give an example of this kind of feedback?

Annual Review 2023. The Supreme Administrative Court of Lithuania:

“<...>The third trend can be seen when looking at electoral cases. The new electoral law, the Electoral Code, which entered into force on 1 September 2022, has had a particular impact on the number of disputes concerning the 2023 elections of municipal councils and mayors. The short period between the entry into force of this legislation and the elections has led to a number of uncertainties at different stages of the electoral process, from the registration of candidates (administrative case No R-4-575/2023) to the vote counting procedures and the organisation of the rerun elections (administrative case No eR-28-502/2023). Thus, the cases examined by the Court not only supplemented the existing case-law, but also had a significant impact on the development of new lines of the Court’s jurisprudence in the field of electoral law.”

47) To what extent does the highest administrative court suggest potential solutions for the issues (legal-technical or other) raised?

The role of the Supreme Administrative Court of Lithuania in addressing issues raised by legislation, whether legal-technical or structural, is primarily one of interpretation rather than direct legislative intervention. The Court’s primary task is to interpret and apply existing laws, ensuring their conformity with the Constitution and other legal frameworks. When faced with ambiguous or problematic legal provisions, the Court typically aims to clarify the law’s application through its rulings, relying on established legal principles and precedents. While its decisions may highlight problematic areas in the legislation and provide reasoning that legislators or policymakers could take into account, any actual changes to the law remain the responsibility of the legislative or executive branches. In its rulings, the Court may indirectly point to potential areas of improvement by identifying inconsistencies, gaps, or ambiguities in the legal text. This can serve as guidance for lawmakers, signaling where further refinement of the law might be needed, without the Court actively proposing specific solutions.

48) What kind of considerations determine whether and to what extent the highest administrative court provides feedback? Does the separation of powers limit the court in this regard and if so, how?

The Supreme Administrative Court of Lithuania plays a role in maintaining the quality and coherence of the legal system, which sometimes involves signaling issues to the legislature. This is part of an ongoing exchange between the branches of government. However, the Court is mindful of the separation of powers, and this principle restricts its ability to go beyond its primary function of interpreting and applying the law. When considering whether to provide feedback, the Court assesses if the issue at hand is recurring or likely to cause broader challenges in future cases. If the problem appears systemic and not easily resolved through a single ruling, the Court may find it more appropriate to highlight the issue for legislative attention by preparing reference for the constitutional ruling or reference for the preliminary ruling. Nevertheless, the Court remains cautious in this regard and does not propose specific solutions, limiting itself to addressing the legal inconsistencies relevant to the case before it. It should also be noted that the Court does not evaluate the political or economic appropriateness of contested legal acts or actions (or inaction); rather, it focuses solely on determining whether there has been a violation of the law or other legal acts in the specific case. This adherence to procedural law reinforces the Court's commitment to upholding the rule of law while respecting the roles of other government branches.

49) Does the highest administrative court keep track of the given feedback, for instance in a list that is annexed to an annual review?

0 Yes
 No

Please explain:

50) Does the highest administrative court monitor the effectiveness of feedback, for instance by speaking to representatives of the government or by monitoring new legislation?

0 Yes
 No

Please explain:

The Court does not actively monitor the effectiveness of its feedback. While the Court may highlight areas that require legislative attention, it does not have the mandate or resources to evaluate the implementation or outcomes of its feedback. There may be still instances of informal contact with representatives of the government. These informal interactions can occur during conferences, seminars, or discussions related to legal issues, where court officials might share their insights or observations on recurring legal concerns.

51) Is there any follow-up if the legislator does not respond to issues that are raised by the highest administrative court?

0 Yes
 No

Please explain:

The Court operates within the framework of separation of powers, which delineates its role in interpreting and applying the law from the legislative function of creating and amending statutes. Therefore, if legislators choose not to respond or take action on the Court's observations, the Court does not engage in further follow-up or advocacy.

52) Does the highest administrative court have any formal or informal contacts with the legislator, for instance via its civil servants? If so, what kind of issues does it discuss there?

Yes
 No

Please explain:

The Court does have informal contacts with legislator. These interactions are generally focused on discussing overarching themes related to legal feedback rather than specific individual cases or pending legal matters.

53) Is there a role for the highest administrative court in the process of legislation, i.e. by advising the legislator ex ante during the process of legislation?

Yes
 No

Please explain:

When drafting legislation, the legislature often conducts public consultations, allowing various stakeholders, including the court, to express their views on proposed laws. In this context, the Court may provide opinion to highlight legal considerations and implications related to the draft legislation. Additionally, if a proposed law directly affects the Court's functions or operations, the court is usually formally requested to provide its insights. Moreover, representatives from the Court, judges, and legal scholars sometimes participate in working groups tasked with drafting legislation. This collaboration allows them to offer expert opinions and evaluations on proposed legal acts, ensuring that practical and legal aspects that may impact judicial processes are considered.

54) Does the highest administrative court have contact with the advisory body about problems (legal-technical or other) that arise from its case law?

Yes
 No

Explanation if desired:

See the answer to question 1.
